

When you choose to be who you are, you dispel any lies that mask your beauty, your potential, your radiance or your love. And what's revealed is the True and Radiant You. ~Tambra Harck

If today were my last day on Earth and I could share 500 words of brilliance with the world, here are the important things I'd want to pass along to others...

There is spark of vitality that lives in you. This spark is a miracle that only you can bring to life. It is your gift, your Purpose, your passion... your presence. You must nurture this spark, and allow it to grow. Be curious, compassionate, courageous and committed as you discover what this is in you.

Because it is unique to you and only you, I cannot tell you with certainty how you'll find it or know it. I just know that you must. When you find it, and I trust that you will, if you haven't already, the next step is to fall in absolute LOVE with it!

Fall in love with your Purpose and with the living of it. Fall in love with what has you feeling vital, awake and alive. Fall in love with your heart's desire. Fall in love with yourself in every way. Love even those parts of you that may seem to be unlovable, unforgivable or unworthy.

As each moment passes, nourish this unique expression of you and be guided by it, though it may be challenging at times. You might even be so frightened that you'll think you'd rather die than to live this unique expression that is you. That's a natural response to expanding to beyond what you've ever known or done before. Breathe, and remember the spark that lives in you is a miracle. It is ignited by the divine. So breathe spirit into your body, into your thoughts, and have faith, pure faith that you are "made for this!"

Ready for the part that really turns me on? This is what will make the most potent contribution to your life and to the world:

Join together with others who are intentionally, courageously opening their hearts and nourishing their unique sparks! I believe that more and more people are awakening to divine consciousness, finding their voices and opening their hearts than at any time in human history.

Find others with whom to collaborate. It won't be hard. I suspect they'll appear as if by magic. Watch for synchronicity, those moments that seem to be without cause and effect, as they swiftly bring about opportunities, resources and answers you were just asking for.

There is a cross-cultural, collective call sounding, inviting us to awaken to our individual grace and exquisiteness, to see radiance in our fellow men and women, and to bring joy, meaning and love through us in service to life. Do your part, not because the world needs you to, but because you need to. The spark of vitality that lives in you will light your way.

